SUNDAY

12th November 2017

1:00 PM to 5:00 PM

Pre-conference Short Course - Taking systematic reviews to the next level: meta-analysis in injury prevention

Presenter: Associate Professor Jake Olivier, School of Mathematics and Statistics, University of New South Wales

Date: Sunday 12th November

Time: 1.00PM - 5.00PM

Venue: SMB campus, S building, Grant Street, Ballarat Central

Cost: $90 for conference delegates and $135 for non-registered delegates.

To book for this pre-conference short course, please do so via the registration process.

This workshop is aimed at researchers and practitioners who are familiar with the basic conduct of systematic reviews but not yet experienced with conducting meta-analyses.

The workshop will use one or more existing injury data sets to illustrate how to use software and interpret statistical results.

- Introduction on key elements of systematic reviews for meta-analyses
- Measures of risk (odds ratio, relative risk) and study design (case-control, RCT)
- Simple meta-analysis model including assumptions
- Statistical software for meta-analyses
- Heterogeneity (random vs fixed effects meta-analysis, tests for heterogeneity, index of heterogeneity)
- Assessing publication bias (funnel plot, regression test, rank correlation test)
- Generating forest plots
- Meta-regression for study-level predictors
- Multivariate meta-regression for multiple study-level outcomes

All enquiries regarding the course content can be emailed directly to...
Ballarat City Walking Tour

Calling all students attending the 2017 AIPN conference, join us for a pre-conference social event!

The Ballarat city walking tour will incorporate a guided tour on foot of the highlights of this beautiful historic town, as well as the chance to meet and mingle with fellow students in a relaxed environment before the conference gets started. We will also be joined on the walk by some leading researchers and practitioners, including conference Co-Chairs Professor Caroline Finch and Professor Rebecca Ivers, providing you with a unique opportunity to meet some of the biggest names in the injury prevention field.

Further details will be released closer to the time, but make sure you keep this event in mind when booking your travel to Ballarat.

For those requiring mobility assistance, please contact Lauren Fortington at l.fortington@federation.edu.au

Date: Sunday 12 November 2017
Time: 5.30PM - approx. 7.00PM
Cost: FREE! The cost of this activity is included in your conference registration.
Meeting place: To be confirmed

IP's Got Talent

Structured along the lines of a Nerd Nite, this pre-conference evening event will provide delegates a chance to get together to catch up with colleagues (or meet new ones), while warming up for a week of injury prevention intellect: come along, share a laugh, and embrace your inner nerdiness! Facilitated by Dr Dale Hanson it will include a 1 man show on the story of Dr John Snow, a founding father of modern epidemiology, light-hearted presentations by 3 student injury prevention researchers, and plenty of time for conversation in between.

If you are interested in being one of the student presenters at this event please contact Amy (student program co-coordinator) on avas0473@uni.sydney.edu.au

Date: Sunday 12 November 2017
Time: 7.00PM start
Location: To be confirmed
Costs: Main meals for students will be generously subsidised by the AIPN. Food and beverages for non-student attendees will be at your own expense (but we are working to keep these costs as minimal as possible)
Speaker profiles to be confirmed

<td>Picture this- you meet someone new, 2 minutes into the conversation they ask that dreaded question ‘what’s your research all about?’ How do you answer? How do you present your research in everyday conversation? The ability to convey your research interests and experience informally yet professionally is an essential skill, yet one that students often struggle with. This exclusively student event is designed to help you with this. In the format of structured speed networking you will rotate around the room to meet a new student, present your ‘research pitch’ to each other, and provide and receive feedback. Some mid-career researchers will be available for help and guidance if you get stuck. By the end of this event you will have refined your pitch, built confidence informally presenting your research and networked with a group of students along the way.</td>

Student Panel: Things I wish I knew... about a career in research

Jobs in injury prevention are varied, and that's one of the things that's so appealing about this field. This event will include a panel of leaders and up-and-comers in injury prevention research and implementation who will briefly present their career journey to date, lessons they've learnt along the way, and things they wished they had known earlier in their careers. There will also be lots of time for facilitated discussion and questions, which can be sent in anonymously in advance if preferred. Panel members will be announced soon.
